FIG. 6 depicts different schedule lengths of a program guide, the schedule lengths being identified in a bar graph indicated generally by the reference numeral 600, based on the storage of extended program information. It can be seen that the schedule length of the program guide is shortest when the maximum amount of program guide information is stored in the memory 204 (i.e., 100%). The maximum amount of program guide information comprises basic program information and all the extended program information for each program in the program guide.
